A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY!
CARBOLINE!
A Deodorized extract of Petroleum,
The Only Article that Will Restore Hair on Bald Heads.

What the World has been Wanting for Centuries.

The greatest discovery of our day, so far as a large portion of humanity is concerned, is CARBOLINE, an article prepared from petroleum, and which effects a complete and radical cure in cases of baldness, or where the hair, owing to diseases of the scalp, has become thin and tends to fall out. It excites a speedy restorative, and while its use secures a luxuriant growth of hair, it also brings back the natural color, and gives the most complete satisfaction in the using. The falling out of the hair, the accumulations of dandruff, and the premature change in color are all evidences of a diseased condition of the scalp and the glands which nourish the hair. To arrest these causes the article used must possess medical as well as chemical virtues, and this change must begin under the scalp to be of permanent and lasting benefit. Such an article is CARBOLINE, and, like many other wonderful discoveries, it is found to consist of elements almost in their natural state. Petroleum oil is the article which is made to work such extraordinary results; but it is after it has been chemically treated and completely deodorized that it is in proper condition for the toilet. It was in far-off Russia that the effect of petroleum upon the hair was first observed, a Government officer having noticed that a partially bald-headed servant of his, when trimming the lamps, had a habit of wiping his oil-besmeared hands in his scanty locks, and the result was in a few months a much finer head of black, glossy hair than he ever had before. The oil was tried on horses and cattle that had lost their hair from the cattle plague, and the results were as rapid as they were marvelous. The roots and even the tails of horses, which had fallen out, were completely restored in a few weeks. These experiments were heralded to the world, but the knowledge was practically useless to the prematurely bald and gray, as no one in civilized society could tolerate the use of refined petroleum as a dressing for the hair. But the skill of one of our chemists has overcome the difficulty, and by a process known only to himself, he has, after very elaborate and costly experiments, succeeded in deodorizing refined petroleum, which renders it susceptible of being handled as daintily as the famous eau de cologne. The experiments with the deodorized liquid on the human hair were attended with the most astonishing results. A few applications, where the hair was thin and falling, gave remarkable tone and vigor to the scalp and hair. Every particle of dandruff disappears on the first or second dressing, and the liquid so searching in its nature, seems to penetrate to the roots at once, and set up a radical change from the start. It is well known that the most beautiful colors are made from petroleum, and, by some mysterious operation of nature, the use of this article gradually imparts a beautiful light brown color to the hair which by continued use, deepens to a black. The color remains permanent for an indefinite length of time, and the change is so gradual that the most intimate friends can scarcely detect its presence. It is a word, it is the most wonderful discovery of the age, and well calculated to make the prematurely bald and gray rejoice.

We advise our readers to give it a trial, feeling satisfied that one application will convince them of its wonderful effects.—Pittsburgh Commercial, of Oct. 22, 1877.

The article is telling its own story in the hands of thousands who are using it with the most gratifying and encouraging results!

W. H. Brent & Co., Fifth Avenue Pharmacy, says, "We have sold preparations for the hair for upward of twenty years, but have never sold an article that would give such universal satisfaction. We therefore recommend it with confidence to our friends and the general public."

Mr. GODFREY F. HALT, of the Oates Opera Troupe, writes: "After six weeks' use I am convinced, as are also my comrades, that your 'Carboline' has and is producing a wonderful growth of hair where I had no hair for years."

C. H. SMITH, of the Jennie Hight Combination, writes: "After using your 'Carboline' three weeks I am convinced that bald heads can be 'restored.' It's simply wonderful in my case."

B. F. ARTHUR, of Fall River, Mass., writes: "Your 'Carboline' has restored my hair after everything else had failed."

JOSEPH E. POND, attorney-at-law, N. Attleboro, Mass., writes: "For some time I have been a victim of baldness, and had lost from my head nearly all the hair it had ever had. Your 'Carboline' has now given me a splendid head of hair, and I am convinced that its continued use will have as good a head of hair as I ever had. It is growing now nearly as rapidly as that does after it is cut."

CARBOLINE
Is now presented to the public without fear of contradiction as the best Restorative of the Hair the world has ever produced.
Price, ONE DOLLAR per bottle.

OTHER'S FAULTS.

In speaking of a person's faults,
Pray don't forget your own;
Remember those with homes of glass
Should never throw a stone;
If you have nothing else to do;
But talk of those who sin,
'Tis better you commence at home,
And from that point begin.

You have no right to judge a man
Until he's fairly tried;
Should you not like his company,
You know the world is wide;
Some may have faults, and who have not?
The old as well as the young,
Perhaps you may for all I know,
Have fifty to their one.

I'll tell you of a better plan,
And find it works full well,
To try your own defects to cure,
Before of others tell;
And tho' I sometimes hope to be
Not worse than others I know;
My own shorte comings bid no let
The faults of others go,

Then let us all, when we commence
To sit under friend of foe
Think of the harm one word may do
To those who little know;
Remember curses frequently
Like chickens roost at home;
Don't speak of others faults, until
You've tried to see your own.

Select Story.

ONE NIGHT'S RIDE.

There was a large party of men in the Eagle saloon in Denver, all interested and talking loudly concerning the common pigeon shooting of the next day.

The prize to be awarded to the victor in the match was no less than $1,000—a sufficient payment for a day's work in the opinion of every one.

Much did I wish that I was a skilled shot. One dollar would have been a prize for me. I was, in the current phrase of that country, 'strapped, flat on my back, dead broke.' I was even hungry, and knew not where to turn for a meal.

As I was gloomily meditating upon my future a remark of a newcomer—a miner apparently—struck my ear.

'I'd give $10 if I had my rifle here that I'm used to, I can't do much with this.'

I sprang to my feet in an instant.

'Ten dollars, did you say?' I exclaimed. 'I'll bring it. Where is it?'

'You can't do it. I shall want it early to-morrow morning.'

'Where is it?'

'Down in the camp at Silver Gulch, thirty miles from here.'

'Thirty miles! Give me a full meal and a good horse, and you shall have your gun at the time you wish.'

A hearty laugh greeted my proposal. The miner good-naturedly surveyed me from head to foot. Famished as I was, I looked young, healthy and strong.

'Well, you shall have a square meal at any rate.'

I insisted that I could accomplish the feat, although the sun was then setting, and soon after was given full directions and a horse which I selected myself—a wiry and firy mustang.

Sixty miles to be traveled before 8 o'clock on the following morning. I had set myself a painful task; but the ten dollars I was to receive would enable me to look about me for ten days, and something might then, or before then, turn up.

I had come to Denver in the hope of employment, which my education as a civil engineer might great me. I had found five surveyors ready to offer their services where one was wanted. I had gradually run out of funds.

I had chosen my mustang well, as regarding his endurance. I trusted to my horsemanship to conquer his wildness.

His wicked eye proved not to belie his spirit. As soon as I mounted, disregarding any attempt of mine to guide him, he galloped furiously on as though possessed by a demon. He was proceeding in a direction but little divergent from that which I desired. I was half content, and soon, upon reaching an open plain, I forced him to acknowledge his master.

We were now alone in an ocean of prairie grass. The moon shone out bright and full, and I guided myself by the stars.

Although I was in a rather lawless district, I entertained no fears of bodily harm from any passer-by I might encounter. Indians and other marauding bands had well nigh disappeared from the neighborhood.

There had been talk of a band of Mexican bandits a month before, but nothing had been heard of them since.

I felt even ecstatic as we jogged onward at the easy trot into which my pony had fallen after his first burst of speed. The atmosphere was delightful; a gentle breeze fanned my cheek. I experienced a sense of freedom, of independence, of lordliness, as I looked about me over the vast plain.

My pony showed no sign of weariness when we must have advanced full twenty miles, maintaining an easy pace.

It was not until lights gleamed in the distance that he dropped into a walk, and as we drew near them he again voluntarily broke into a gallop.

We reached our destination about 11 o'clock, having traveled thirty-five rather than thirty miles in five hours.

I soon found my employer's partner, although he had to be vigorously shaken before he could be awakened. I fancy whisky had something to do with his profound slumbers; stated my business and presented a written missive.

I obtained the rifle, a breech-loader of magnificent construction, valued at $500. I secured as well, some refreshment for myself and horse, and after an hour's delay started on my return trip.

My mustang appeared to think he had done his duty for the night, and I found it difficult to urge him from the camp.

At the expiration of two miles—indeed, when my hand relaxed its pull on the rein—his head would slowly turn to the camp, and but for watchfulness on my part I would have found myself there again.

I was now in quite a drowsy condition and would easily have fallen fast asleep on my pony's back.

By-and-by, as I became convinced that the animal would proceed as I wished, I yielded to a feeling of extreme lassitude and slept.

How long I slept I could not tell. I awoke with a start, and at once placed my hand behind me to assure myself that the rifle was still securely fastened to my saddle.

I felt nothing. I looked; it was gone.

The thrill of horror that at once ran through me again gave me energy.

I pulled the pony stock still and meditated.

Thoughts of lynch law flashed through my mind. Had I indeed lost the gun? It would be said that I had stolen it—sold it. I would certainly be arrested if I returned without it, and held until news would be received from the camp. It would be known that the gun had been given me. Apart from its pecuniary value it was highly prized by the owner. To what might his extreme rage incite his companions against me, a stranger and friendless?

As well be hung for a sheep as a lamb was a thought that for a moment flitted through my brain. Should I not seize the pony and flee to another place.

Fatigued as I was, and come what would I must retrace my steps and try and find the gun.

The prairie grass trampled by my pony's feet indicated the course I had taken. I turned him back upon that path.

Again and again I was obliged to dismount and drag my sore and wearied limbs over the ground, which I carefully scrutinized, to be sure I could make no mistake.

All the while I was tormented by the thought that my agonized painstaking might be entirely useless; that the gun might have been stolen from behind me by some wanderer as I slept.

How could I know? I was but a drowning man snatching at a straw as I stumbled onward.

It seemed ages as I searched. What time was passing? Even if I found the rifle, could I reach the owner with it at the promised hour? Only by giving it to him at the hour of entry for the match, could it prove as desired by him, or I receive the ten dollars I so longed for.

With fevered brain and straining, bloodshot eyes I continued the search, impatient and patient at once.

Clouds were gathering in the sky; into one of them the moon now passed, and the light so necessary to me was obscured.

I remained motionless. Would I go mad? My power for collecting thought seemed vanishing.

Again the moon came out clear and bright; and there close to my feet, made shine something metallic.

It was the rifle! I had found it.

I must place it before as I rode this time. With fragments of the broken twine dangling from the saddle, I fastened the breech to my left wrist, and, remounting my horse allowed the gun to rest on my legs as I advanced. The jounce, jounce of the weapon added to my discomfort; but, at least, it was secure, and I was kept awake. But now where was I? I recognized no landmark. The aspect generally was strange to me; I seemed to have neared the limit of the prairie: a line of hills lay against the horison, and beyond the day was breaking. With victory ready to my grasp, was I lost! Suddenly I descried in the distance what seemed a human habitation. I traveled toward it and rejoiced to have it proved a rancho. I reached it and hollored.

When I was within a few paces of the house, a window in the second story suddenly opened, and a rifle barrel was pretruded aimed directly at me.

I was thunderstruck at this proceeding. Had I come to the lair of a desperado? But instantly I bethought of the suspicious appearance I presented, with my gun across my knees! as if I was ready for action.

'I have gone astray, I shouted. 'Where is Denver?'

There was a silence—still the rifle was pointed at me—and then I heard a low laugh. It was echoed by the silvery tones of a pleasant laughter—a woman's laugh. I felt safe.

'Denver is two miles further east,' was now answered me, in a rather juvenile voice.

So I was not lost; I would triumph in my mission. I was within easy reach of my destination.

With that thought, my overtasked energies asserted their weakness. I longed for a momentary rest, at least. Could I not obtain it here! I lingered, despite the gun which menaced me.

If they wanted to shoot they would have shot, I reasoned. But the light, now strengthening, they must see I was not a ruffian.

I was right; the gun was soon withdrawn, and then reappeared at the door of the house, in the hand of a lad about eighteen years old, who, laughing, approached me and said: 'Excuse me, stranger, but you are rather an early visitor. I see you're a gentleman. Father's away, and the women folks are easy scared. I thought it best to be on the safe side.'

'I'd like a little refreshment,' was all I said in response.

I was really in a fainting condition, as pale as death. The lad instantly took pity on my plight, helped me to alight, and led me to a seat in the portico of the house, to a pillar of which he tied my horse.

He entered, and returned with a glass of wine, which gave me life at once, and I told him of the loss of my rifle.

I was in the midst of my narration, when a beautiful face appeared, timidly, at the door, and a hand outscratched to the lad a sandwhich, which he gave to me. I ate it, and told my story as the reader has it, gaining another listener in the person of a charming girl of sixteen.

It was now 6 o'clock. I had two hours in which to travel two miles, but I thought I had best set about it. The mustang was tired as myself. He proceeded at a walk.

However, as we reached the confines of the town he increased his speed, and it was a lively trot that he entered the stable to which he belonged.

I exhibited little of the same spirit when I presented the coveted rifle to its owner and received the ten dollars.

I was yet sufficiently recovered from fatigue, at the close of the day, to be among those who were congratulating the winner of the prize—my employer. He forced upon me another ten dollar bill. He would admit of no refusal. Those two ten dollar bills proved the foundation of quite a little fortune. I am at present married and living in the rancho I have mentioned, but expect soon to leave for the east. My wife being still very young, is curious to see higher civilization, Boston and other cities.

Power of Masonry.

That Masonry is a power cannot be denied. As an institution it has obtained a strong foothold in all parts of the civilized world, and is generally recognized as one of the great uplifting forces of human society. As a Fraternity it leads all other associations of a like social and benevolent character, and has a constantly augmenting influence among the most progressive communities of the earth. Masonry claims to rank with those potential factors of civilization and humanity, the ministry of which is best approved. Can it justify such a claim? Does it indeed exert a deep and widespread influence of good? and, if so, what is the impulsion of such a power?

We may find proof of the power of Masonry both in history and experience. The records that have been made are abundant to show that its potent presence has been felt in many of the forward movements of society and the world, and that it has been both a directing and an ameliorating agency to individuals and communities alike. Masonry has not been accustomed to boast of its might in these or other respects, nor to magnify its gifts for the public benefit, but enough is on record to establish the fact that it has always been an earnest ally of the rights of man and the good order of society; that it has given aid to those humanities and reforms whereby mankind have been helped to a better condition, so making some visible contributions to the general welfare, albeit much of its influence has been exerted in ways so quiet and unheralded as hardly to claim the notice of those who only judge of power by its outward ex pression.

The power of Masonry may be proven by subjective methods—by the testimony of individual experience. Let us look within and ask ourselves the question, have we not been benefited by Masonry? As the teachings and suggestions of the Masonic system have fallen upon our ears and obtained lodgment in our minds, has not our thought been quickened and enlarged? Have we not been quickened in our mental sensibilities—made happier and better—as we have drank in the lessons of our royal art, and shared in the sweet communions for which masonry provides so many delightful occasions? The genuine Mason needs no outside testimony to assure him of the blessed power wielded by the institution to which he stands pledged; he has felt—he feels continually—its magnetic touch on his soul, and appreciates how much his thought and character have been moulded by its influence.

Do we ask in what this power consists? Answer may be given that such power depends in part on that system of moral and philosophical truth which is put forth under the Masonic name, and illustrated and enforced by such varied symbolism as that which attaches to the representation of the Masonic Ritual. Truth is always a potent force in the world, but all truth is not of one and the same efficiency. The multiplication table is a statement of truths, but it does not greatly move or edify the learner.

The truth which Masonry has in its keeping, and which it enunciates and enforces in ways most significant! relate to the most important themes. They have to do with questions of duty and happiness, with what relates to life on its supreme side, with the everlasting verities of God and Heaven. The Masonic system has power, because it is not trivial, frivolous and superficial; but on the contrary, because it deals with principals and truths that are of noble and far-reaching import. It is a science and art in itself, and is concerned with all sound learning, with all true philosophy. Beyond this, however, Masons represents great truths essential to the satisfaction of the moral nature—truths that relate to the being of God and His relation to man, to the immortality of the soul and the celestial life.

But Masonry is powerful, not alone on account of the truth incorporated in its system, but also because of that principle of love which it seeks to make the great influencing motive of life. In the appreciation of this most excellent grace it brings its disciples into close and sympathetic accord, and bids them have fellowship with and help for each other. Brotherhood is the watchword which means so much to every well instructed Mason, as it suggests to him both the duties and the privileges which are his. Many things are shown him in the way of the unfolding of the ritual and the teaching of its lessons, but, above all, he is reminded that love is the crowning of a noble life; It is indeed the bond of perfection and the fulfilling of the law.

Here, then, we find two of the potent elements that give Masonry its power in the world—the truth that is enwrought in the system, and the love to which it exhorts with such earnestness, and which it illustrates, at least in some partial degree, by word and by deed. That these are grand sources of a world-wide influence cannot be gainsaid. Only let Masons be faithful to what their institution stands for and inculcates, and no fear of its waning influence need ever be entertained.—Freemasons' Repository.

"Women Never Think."

If the crabbed old bachelor who uttered this sentiment could but witness the intense thought, deep study and thorough investigation of women in determining the best medicines to keep their families well, and would note their sagacity and wisdom in selecting Hop Bitters as the best, and demonstrating it by keeping their families in perpetual health, at a mere nominal expense, he would be forced to acknowledge that such sentiments are baseless and false.—Picayune

Philadelphia Statistics.

From the last census it appears that Philadelphia covers 129 square miles and has 900 miles of paved and 1,100 miles of unpaved streets. The united length of her sewers is 410 miles, of her gas mains, 705 miles, of her water pipes 730 miles, and of her city railways, 288 miles. At night the streets are lighted by 12,250 gas lamps. The population, 847,000 in number, live in 123,000 houses, of which probably 100,000 are owned by their occupants. The city has 600 building associations with a total capital of $50,000,000. There are 115 hospitals and other charitable buildings, and 645 places of worship capable of holding 450,000 persons. The number of public schools is 472 and they educate 11,000 children yearly. The National Banks of the city have a capital of $300,000,000. The real estate valuation of public and private property in the city is $545,000,000.

River Navigation of Pittsburgh.

Aside from her great industries, Pittsburgh, as the head of navigation on the Ohio, claims attention, and extends her influence along the 18,000 miles of navigable streams attainable by her river steamers. This influence she retains in spite of the rapid growth of that great destroyer of the river trade, the railway. On either side of the three valleys that radiate from Pittsburgh are found the omnipresent parallel lines of rails, six arms of a great cuttle-fish, whose body is the smoky city, and whose suction disks are the station houses that draw the life from the trade of each stream. On the Allegheny this trade has long disappeared entirely; the Monongahela bears upon its slack-watered current a line of fine boats that have existed since the earliest days of steam navigation but whose business begins to feel railway encroachment. The Ohio is plied by a line of Cincinnati and Pittsburgh packets, and by smaller craft earning a precarious existence between 'way' points, but the glory of the river is departed.

And yet, at favorable stages of water in the fickle Ohio, the levee at Pittsburgh shows most animated scenes. A steamer reaching the city during a stage of water favorable for boating—say four to eight feet of water in the channel—would be treated to a most interesting sight on the Monongahela Wharf, between that many-pieced and venerable structure the Monongahela Suspension-Bridge and the 'Point.' This scene is especially characteristic when witnessed from the upper or 'hurricane' deck of some big 1000-ton steamer. The observer is reminded of nothing so much as of a freshly disturbed ant-hill. This similie is borne out by the action of the double stream of big black 'rousters,' i. e., colored boat hands. As these pass in opposite directions over the gangplank, each biped ant bears, not a milk-white egg, but a fat sack of bran as to the out-goers, or a box of glass or bar of steel as to the incoming procession. This double process goes on until the great hull has exchanged its St. Louis freight for Pittsburgh's products. And so skillfully is this same hull fashioned and adapted to the precarious channels of Western rivers, that, with a thousand tons of freight aboard will scarcely draw four and a half feet of water. And in this way, during the first three months of 1880, 10,000 tons per month of the varied products of Pittsburg's fiery hearted furnaces were wafted by steam and current 3500 miles toward the setting sun. Kindly showers thus washed away 30,

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, Nov. 26, 1880.

A new railroad track, built by the Syracuse and Binghamton railroad through Tullman swamp, south of Preble, N. Y., disappeared while the workingmen were at dinner They had left a gravel train on the track, and when returning saw them sinking out of sight in the marsh. A pond of water near the tract disappeared, the earth rising and filling it, while the water settled in a depression in another place.

Governor Williams Dead.

INDIANAPOLIS, November 20.—Governor James D. Williams died at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon. He was taken ill on the day of the Presidential election, but his illness was not considered dangerous until within three or four days. His disease was inflammation of the bladder, with which he has been afflicted for about fifteen years. His funeral will take place at his farm, near Wheatland, in Knox county, where he has resided for forty years. The time for the funeral has not been definitely settled, but it will probably take place on Wednesday. His remains will lie in state to-morrow and Monday. Governor Williams' wife died only a few months ago at his farm home, in Knox county.

The latest and most reliable estimates of the wheat crop of the country for 1880 is put in at 455,649,000 bushels. The amount required for home consumption is estimated at 265,000,000 bushels, which leaves 190,640,000 bushels for export. Among the countries which must buy wheat England stands at the head with a deficit of 120,000,000, according to the report of the board of trade. Next comes France which needs an import or 42,000,000 bushels, next Germany with a need for 20,000,000 bushels. The total amount of wheat required by foreign countries beyond their production of wheat is estimated by the British board of trade at 227,000,000 bushels, or nearly 40,000,000 bushels more tha the supply of the United States for export. The rest will be contributed by Austria, Hungary, Canada, Australia, Russi, and other wheat producing countries

Not Guilty of Perjury.

HARRISBURG, November 20.—The perjury charges against William H. Kemble, Jesse R. Crawford and Charles B. Salter were dropped in the court of Dauphin county to-day. The cases were called soon after court convened. After a jury had been empanelled, District Attorney Hollinger said that to convict in the cases under consideration it would be necessary that the statements of the defendants upon which the charges were predicated should be contradicted by at least two witnesses. Such witnesses were not to be found, and the Commonwealth, therefore, did not expect a conviction. He wanted the cases tried, however, to clear the record, but he shouldn't attempt to call any witnesses. The cases were accordingly submitted without testimony or further argument, when the jery, without leaving the box, returned verdicts of "not guilty," the same jury deciding the three cases.

If the Republican national leaders are wise, they will not attempt to bring to the threshold of Garfield's administration a new and irritating sectional issue by attempting to postpone the Congressional apportionment, on the pretext that some of the Southern States have forfeited full representative power by depriving certain voters of the right of suffrage. The proposition to inquire into such restraint upon suffrage is merely the pretext for postponing the apportionment, with the view of forcing some party advantage out of the apportionment by a Republican Congress; but such a reopening of sectional strife should be manfully condemned by the sincere men of both sections. Such an inquiry would extend to the North as well as the South, and, if honestly prosecuted, it would exhibit a degree and extent of political coercion in the North at the late election, that was not equaled in any Southern States, and it would absolutely set aside the electoral vote of Rhode Island and deprive her of one Congressman. If the proposed investigation could be made in good faith it would be well to have it made; but a partisan investigation, conceived and prosecuted solely for party purposes, would result as all such inquiries of the past have resulted, and the only practical outcome would be general sectional disturbance. If any of the States North or South, have disfranchised voters, the House of Representatives will have ample opportunity to express and correct them in the disposal of contested seats; but if President Garfield would rule wisely and save himself from early defeat in both branches of Congress and from popular distrust, he will permit no renewal of sectional strife on any pretext whatever.—Times.

A Fine Memorial.

A REREDOS IN HONOR OF JUDGE PACKER THAT ADORNS ST. MARK'S CHURCH AT MAUCH CHUNK.

The reredos erected in St. Mark's church, Mauch Chunk, to the memory of Judge Packer's family is a magnificent and costly work of art. In front of it stand an altar and super-altar, elaborately sculptured in polished marble. The reredos is in the mid die-pointed style of architecture. The centre and most prominent group, rising above the altar, contains eleven figures and represents the ascension. On each side of this main group are lesser groups in panels. The left hand group represents the appearance of Christ to Mary Magdalene on the morning of the resurrection. The left-hand group represents His appearance to his disciples on the same day in the evening. In the main gable above the central group is a sitting figure of "Our Lord in Majesty.' Below this, in two spandrels, are angels in adoration swinging censers and above the figures in the upper spandrel of the gable is a group of seraphim, introduced in illustration of the prase of the Te Deum, "To thee cherubim and seraphim continually do cry." The inscription, carved in ancient Gothic raised letters, is arranged in sections along the cornice over the side bays on the line of the super-altar and in the panels below the super-altar on each side, as follows:

To the Glory of God and in the memory of Asa Packer.
Born December 29, 1805, Died May 17 1879.

This reredos was erected by his wife, Sarah Y. Packer. | and by his surviving children, Mary H., Robt. A. and Henry E. Packer

Pardee Hall.

THE NEW BUILDING TO BE DEDICATED NOVEMBER 30.

The dedication of Pardee hall, October 21, 1873, was an occasion of deep interest not only to the friends of Lafayette college, but to the friends of the higher education throughout the country. The building itself by its vast and beautiful proportions filled with delight the thousands of spectators gathered from all parts of the Union—some even from distant lands. The patrons and guardians of the college saw, in its enlarged facilities for scientific instruction and research, the beginning of a new era of prosperity for the institution. The borough of Easton, by a general cessation of business and a procession in numbers exceeding any in its previous history, honored the day which gave to their city its chief architectural adornment; and mingled with these emotions of rejoicing, and supreme over them all, was the feeling of heartfelt gratitude to the munificent donor, Mr. A. Pardee, of Hazleton, Pa,

The idea of permanence was naturally connected in the minds of all with the massive solidity of the structure and its great cost, amounting, with the scientific equipment, to nearly $300,000. Probably it occurred to no one of the vast multitude present upon that memorable day that the building could ever be destroyed. It was dedicated in the belief that it would stand a perpetual blessing in the great work of literary and scientific culture, and a monument, lasting as the Pyramids, to the wise liberality of the giver. No wonder it was difficult for those who had looked upon the stately edifice to believe the report, when in June of last year the disastrous tidings flashed over the country: "Pardee hall completely destroyed by fire!"

The grief and despondency, when the fact of its destruction was fully realized, were proportioned to the gladness and hopefulness awakened by its completion in 1873. Could the college recover, at least for a number of years, from such a disaster? But while most perhaps, were doubtful, courageous and hopeful counsels prevailed. The work of restoration was immediately begun, and is now after an interval of a year and a half, upon the point of completion and the noble edifice will be reopened with fitting ceremonies on Tuesday, November 30. And it may be that now some, who eighteen months ago could with difficulty credit the news of its destruction, may have to pause a little before they comprehend the full import of the words when it is said that Pardee hall is rebuilt.

The object of this communication is to give some description of the new edifice Recent as the erection of the first building was, we must now speak of it as the old hall With an existence of but six years, it was canonized by the flames of the night of June 4, 1879, with the honors of antiquity.

Eighty Miles an Hour.

AN ENGINE TO MAKE THIS REMARKABLE SPEED TO BE BUILT AT THE BALDIN WORKS AT PHILADELPHIA.

Colonel E A. L. Roberts, of Titusville, made a contract with the Baldwin locomotive works on Tuesday of last week to build a passenger engine which will be able to run eighty miles an hour and maintain this rate of speed for 100 miles without stopping. The locomotive is to weigh thirty-eight tons, and will comply with standard gauge. The driving wheels will be 6 feet in diameter. The forward trucks and those on the tender will be made of paper, which, it is said, will endure more strain and wear than iron or steel. The wheels will all be of the pattern known as the broad tread, which will enable the engine to run on roads of either 4 feet 8½ inches or 4 feet 10 inches gauge. The most important feature of the locomotive will be the introduction of the Roberts patent cylinder and piston, which has proved capable of saving at least 20 per cent. in steam pressure. The exhaust parts are in a continuous circle around the cylinder, in addition to the usual parts at the ends, and the steam escapes without the waste of force necessary to expel it, as in the cylinders of the old style. The tender will be so constructed as to carry a foot of water under the coal, as well as the usual amount on the sides. There will be a water chamber on the locomotive so arranged that compressed air from the air pump can be admitted in the top of the chamber upon the water, by which means a stream may be forced upon any hot bearing connected with the engine or tender. This is expected to overcome the trouble of hot boxes. The nozzle through which the steam is to pass and create a draft will be eight inches in diameter—about three times the usual size—and the boiler will be the largest that can be put upon the standard gauge trucks. It will be the strongest locomotive ever built, and perfect in every detail. Colonel Roberts, the inventor, is a millionaire, and he built a similar locomotive a few years ago which drew the fast mail train over a portion of the Lake Shore railway, but it was not a success, owing to its poor construction. The improvements it suggested will be taken advantage of in building the new engine. It is stated that Colonel Roberts, who has visited Europe several times and studied the railway systems of that country, is building his new engine for use upon the European continent

Hundreds of Canal Boats Frozen In.

NEW YORK, November 22.—Navigation on the Erie canal came to a standstill late on Saturday night, and the prospects for any resumption this fall are very slim. At Syracuse, Utica and Rochester the ice is over an inch and a half thick. There are nearly, if not quite, a thousand cargoes frozen in, seven hundred of them being west of Utica, or one hundred miles and more from tidewater. Two hundred boats are within fifteen miles of tidewater and may be got through if the weather moderate. Reports received at the Produce Exchange say that there are seven millions of bushels of grain frozen in, of which 1,831,000 are wheat, 4,988,000 corn and 286,000 barley. The result on the market was an advance of 2 to 3 cents in wheat and 2 to 2½ in corn and 25 cents per barrel in flour. The weather continues very cold and the ice is thickening very rapidly. Every moment lessens the probability of getting the boats through this season.

Coal Oil Johnny.

After many strange vicissitudes this much written up young man secured a position at his old occupation as teamster, at $50 a month. Subsequently he was made a baggage master on one of the railroads in the West. He became as economical and saving as he had been the opposite. After a few years' service he had saved enough money to purchase a farm back of Franklin, where he now lives, with $3,000 in the bank and a happy wife and family.

It is believed that from 12 to 20 lives were lost by the burning of the Insane Asylum at St. Peter's Minn. The loss on the building is about $300,000.

A Very Peculiar Trial.

AN AMERICAN IN CHINA ACCUSED OF ABDUCTING A PRETTY NUN FROM A BUDHIST CONVENT.

The San Francisco Chronicle reports the trial of J. H. Bennett, an American at Ningpo, China, on the singular charge of abducting a nun from a Budhist convent at Wenchow. Bennet was employed as tide surveyor of the Chinese customs at that port. His post was on a lonely island in the harbor. He says that a Chinman named Ah Hee proposed to get him a wife, and suggested a handsome young nun in the convent. Bennett acceded, and Ah Hee, with his wife, Ah Sing, formed a plot to secure the girl. With two companions they approached the door of the convent and shouted "Fire." In the confusion they entered the house and carried off Chong Leng, the device, knocking down the mother superior in the attempt. Binding the girl hand and foot they delivered her over to Bennett. Information of the outrage being carried to the Wenchow Taotai, the highest judicial officer of the district, he lodged complaint before the United States Consul at Shanghai, who instructed Dr. Lord, a missionary and United States Consul at Ningpo, to proceed to Wenchow on board the United States ship Mononcacy, and investigate. Bennett was summoned before a Court composed of Dr. Lord and two officers and was found guilty. Bennett appealed to Minister Seward, on the ground of the unconstitutionality of the Court. Seward ordered a new trial, which was concluded on October 3rd last. The girl, Chong Leng, testified to the facts as above and to ill treatment on the part of Bennett. She added that, after begging Bennett by heaven and earth to release her, Ah Hee took her in his boat, on the fourth day after her abduction, to the wharf near the convent, and that she ran home. Ching Fong, the superior, testified that when she heard that Chong Leng was at a foreigner's house she went to the island and saw the defendant. At his front gate she bent her head to the ground before him, and invoked him by heaven and earth, and all the saints in the Budhist calendar to do a good deed and let Chong Leng go. He told her: "No; I'll give you plenty of dollars to live with, but I will keep Chong Leng." She continued: "I told him, 'She helps me in my old age to get rice. I have had her since she was 6 years old, sleeping on my arm; and why did you spoil her name and shame her to the earth?' He said, if you pay me $30—my expenses—you can have her back.' I said, 'I have not had such a sum in my purse for years,' and again knocked my head on the ground. Seeing he was hardened, I went home and informed the village elders, who drew up a petition to the Wenchow Taotai." For the defense Bennett denied any complicity in the abduction. He said that the boatman, Ah Hee, brought the woman to him, and as soon as he found out she came from the nunnery ordered her to be sent back. He endeavored to prove, by means of a proclamation, issued by the Chinese officials 'that in the eleventh moon last year all nunneries were to be closed," and proclaiming that the reason was because the houses were residences of courtezans and vicious women. Several of the young nuns were sold to residents at Wenchow for sums varying from $20 to $30 each, he alleged, and he handed a list of the girls' names into Court. He said, "I merely told Ah Hee that if I liked the girl I would keep her and pay him $5 for his fee. When I found I was in trouble I informed the Commissioner of Customs, Mr. McKay. He suspended me and reported the affair to the Inspector. I am dismissed from the Customs and lost $2500, which I am entitled to. Bennett's counsel, J. J. Henderson, late United States Consul at Amoy, complained that Ah Hee had been kept with his legs in irons for six months (Ah Hee was in Court and could not stand up to be examined); he had received 400 blows upon his thighs and 100 blows upon his face. The provincial Judge at Hangchow had sentenced him to strangulation, the punishment for abduction, and the tardiness in conformation by the Board of Punishment at Peking was the only reason why the decree had not been carried out. Bennett was sentenced by the Court to be imprisoned for a year in the consular jail at Shanghai and to pay a fine of $500. His counsel gave notice of an appeal to the United States Minister, and Bennett was admitted to bail in the sum of $1800. It is thought in China that the case will finally find its way to the United States Supreme Court.

Testing a Railroad Brake.

Dom Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, who visited Lehigh University and the iron works while journeying in this country several years ago, has, according to the Bethlehem Times, some original and very effective ways of doing things. Wishing to test a railroad brake of which he had heard a great deal, he had the appliance adjusted to his locomotive and cars and the engineer instructed how to use it. Then he embarked on board his train and started upon an excursion. At a dangerous point in the road, the engineer, whose train was running at the rate of thirty two miles an hour, saw what was apparently an immense rock a few hundred yards ahead. He put the brakes down with a vigor which may be conceived, succeeding in arresting the train before it came in collision with the obstacle. This, however, when closely examined, proved to be a paste board rock of Dom Pedro's own contrivance. He wanted a practical test of the new brake and this was his way of securing it.

Annual Report on Pensions.

Hon. J. A. Bentley, Commissioner of Pensions, has completed his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior. It shows that on the 30th of June last there were 250,802 persons receiving pensions from the government, the list being composed of army and navy invalids, widows, minor children, etc., surviving soldiers and sailors of the war of 1812, and widows from that war. 8,047 names have been added to the list since last year. During the year 19,545 new pensions were allowed, and 1,377 pensions, previously dropped, restored; 12,875 were dropped. The annual pensions average 10,324, an aggregate for all of $25,917,906,60 exclusive of the arrears. The payments for the year amounted to $37,046,185,80, of which $12,468,191,20 was accrued pension in the new cases.

WILL BE PROSECUTED.—We are informed that some of the Republican leaders who coerced their employers by forcing them to vote with marked ballots will be prosecuted, and that the necessary evidence is now being compiled for that purpose. Those Republicans who bought several votes in this city with coal and groceries will also receive the attention of the proper authorities.—Allentown Rem.

The wife and three children of Daniel Burr, a neighbor's daughter, visiting them, and a female friend of the family, were all suffocated by gas from a "base-burner" stove, in Cleveland, Ohio, on the 16th. One of Burr's daughters is dead, and all the others, except the female friend, are expected to die.

The Russian Scandal.

The Paris correspondent of the London Standard writes: Much as the marriage of the Czar has been talked of abroad, says a St. Petersburg letter, not a word has appeared on the subject in the newspapers o that city. The ceremony, I am informed, took place on July 19, (old style), that is on July 31, (new style), of the present year in the chapel of the palace. The various members of the imperial family, although they had long been warned of the probability of the event, expressed by their conduct their strong disapproval and displeasure at the marriage. Hence it was that at the time of the performance the Czarewitch retired from the capital to Hapsal, on the Esthonian coast, while the Grand Dukes Constantine and Vladimir fled abroad, in order to avoid being witnesses of the act. The marriage ceremony itself was accordingly gone through in the greatest possible quietness and seclusion, the witnesses present including only the Grand Duke Nicholas, the War Minister Milutin and one or two more persons of the court.

At the present time the newly married couple are in Lividia, along with their family, which even at present is a numerous one, the eldest sons being already youths in their teens. The union, long foreseen, and now at length become fact, has its own peculiar significance, and in the sequel can hardly fail to draw after it consequences of the most incisive importance. As soon as the necessary negotiations between the Czar and the rest of the imperial family respecting the future position of the new consort and the children are completed, the marriage will be officially made known. The princess is to receive all the privileges and honorary rights usually accorded to one of her rank, while the children will be recognized as princes of the blood, ranking sixth in order in the imperial family, according to the Czar Paul's rules, for regulating rank, so that they will have the imperial coat of arms without the bearers denoting a grand duke. The Czar, it is also stated, will appoint the Czarewitch as co regent, and will transfer to his shoulders the main burden of the government. All his strictly imperial privileges, however, the Emperor Alexander proposes to retain.

The Princess Dolgoruki, the present consort of the Czar, belongs to one of the oldest and most aristocratic families of Russia. She comes from a princely stock, which is counted among the Rurikovitchie, the descendants of Rurik, the Varagian, or Norse, founder of Russia. In point of high birth, in fact, the house to which the Princess Do Dolegruki belongs surpasses even the race of the Romanoffs, who reigned down to Elizabeth, and then through Anna transferred the crown to the Holstein Gottrop line. The princess, it is whispered, though the assertion is denied in many quarters, is not the first of her family who was on terms of special intimacy with the imperial house, and more particularly with the Czar Alexander. Her elder sister, now the wife of Gen. Albdniski, the governor general of Warsaw, many years ago, it is said, stood in the same relation to the present Czar as she subsequently occupied herself. With the younger sister it is probable that the imperial connection would have been as transient as the Czar's numerous earlier intimacies of a similar character, except for the fact that the acquaintance commenced at a period when the monarch had already passed the prime of life, while on the princess' side it was supported by mental gifts and graces of disposition and character which, not to speak of stature, figure and other personal attractive qualities, existed in a remarkable degree in the younger Princess Dolgoruki.

Some fifteen years ago, when the intimacy began to grow closer and firmer, it provoked more and more displeasure and hostility of the late empress relaxed her opposition to a continuance of the connection, the chief reason of the change being that the influence of the favorite was understood to be exercised in such a way that the monarch, who by no means lacked a fair share of the characteristic passionate qualities of his race, was probably preserved thereby from something worse. In this conviction the deceased Czarina, toward the last, not simply tolerated, but, if anything, rather encouraged and fostered the liason. The sovereign is now aging, and a sudden termination of his life, which might occur at any moment, might have prevented him giving the sanction of marriage to a connection to which he was so completely devoted. For the asthma, by which the Czar has for some years been afflicted, is growing worse; and his general condition of body is constantly becoming weaker. For his new consort the emperor has made provision in various ways. Among other things, he has bought for her the palace of the Grand Duchess Catharine at a cost of 2,000,000 rub'es, and it is said that he has already given it to his consort. It is, however, in Lividia that the Czar intends to fix his permanent residence after the promulgation of his marriage.

Two thirds of the town of Newport, Ark., were destroyed by fire on the 15th. Two hundred families are homeless and destitute The loss is estimated at $200,000. A California mining town named Mammoth City is reported to have been destroyed by fire on the 14th. The Chemical Copper Works in Phoenixville, Pa., owned by a New York company, and employing sixty men, were burned on the 16th. Loss $20,000.

The proverbial slowness of justice was illustrated at Derby, Eng., recently, when a man was sent to jail for three months as a rogue and vagabond for deserting his wife in 1866. The police had been looking for him for fourteen years, yet he had been quietly working all the while in a neighboring town. Meanwhile his wife had received parish relief to the amount of £300.

John Morgan was under engagement to marry Lottie Church, at Sandy Lane, Ala., He deserted her and went to live in an adjoining county. When told of his perfidy, she prayed that he might be punished by instant death. It chanced that at exactly that hour he was killed by the fall of a tree. Lottie believes that her prayer caused his death, and is crazed by remorse.

"Really, my dear,' said Mr. Jones to his better half, "you have sadly disappointed me. I once considered you a jewel of a woman, but you've turned out only a bit of matrimonial paste." "Then, my love," was the reply. "Console yourself with the idea that paste is very adhesive, and will stick to you as long as you live."

At the semi-annual session, on the 15th, of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows' Grand Encampment of Pennsylvania, twenty-four representatives from subordinate bodies throughout the State were admitted. Officers were nominated, to be elected next spring. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania began its semi annual session on the 16th.

A young white girl living at Kingston, N. Y., recently became enamored of a colored man. They determined to marry, and elope, but every minister to whom application was made refused to perform the ceremony. The girl finally blackened her face and hands with cork, and upon the first application to a clergyman, they were married.

A Monument to Columbus.

Recently a lot of old bones were found under the cathedral on the island of Santo Domingo, and the congress having considered the proof sufficient that the remains were those of "ze great Christofero Columbo," it has been decided to erect a monument to the memory of the great discoverer, and all American governments are solicited to make subscriptions thereto. This is certainly a good enough way for the Santo Domingo government to embellish its capital with works of art. But whether these are the identical bones of Christopher Columbus or whether or not the bones of any one would survive four hundred years without being resolved into their native dust, are questions which will naturally provoke discussion. The American continent with its teeming millions; its busy hives of industry and its magnificant public improvements its wealth and its culture; its liberty regulated by law and its glorious possibilities of future development, is a far grander monument to the genius and heroism of Columbus than any that can be reared by human hands. This proposition of the Santo Domingo government sounds very much like the suggestion of Mark Twain to erect a monument of our great progenitor Adam at Elmira, New York.

TWO HOURS OF FUN.

The amusement patrons of Bloomsburg and vicinity want something to laugh at, something to drive dull care away and make them feel happy. They will have an opportunity to laugh heartily on Wednesday evening December first when Jule Keen and Sallie Adams the musical queen appear in their songs, dances and wonderful performances on all kinds of instruments forming a brass band and orchestra themselves. There are however fifteen more persons in the company and a good performance is assured. Go quick and get a reserved seat as there will be a crowded house.

"I have weighed the two pounds of butter you sent us this morning," said an irate customer to a dealer in the above mentioned article, "and am surprised to find that it is short weight just three ounces. If that is your way of dealing I must buy my butter somewhere else." The butter merchant looked up surprised; but, without declaring his innocence, replied; "Well, that is very strange, because I put the two pounds of sugar I bought of you in the scales and gave you the full weight in butter.

The funeral services of Christian R. Alleman, took place in the Lutheran church on Sunday morning November 21, 1880. He came to his death by the burning of some Japan which was being heated on the stove. The Japan boiled over on the stove and caught fire causing an explosion. In his excitement at saving the house from fire, his clothing became wrapped in flames, and he rushed out on the street where two men caught him, but too late to save his life. The accident occurred on the 12th, and he suffered greatly until the 18th when he died. He was 28 years, 4 months and 15 days old. He leaves a wife and three small children. He had but recently begun work in Danville and was rapidly gaining an extensive business, when this sad death overtook him. He was a son-in-law of Stephen Knorr of this town.

The quarters of the Winona Fire Company are now completed. The front room is furnished as a parlor, with Brussels carpet, marble top table, sofas, nickle plated stove, handsome chandelier, book case and secretary, window cornices and lambrequins, pictures and everything else to make it comfortable and attractive. The back room will be used for entertainments, and as a place to keep the uniforms and other property of the company. A room under the Opera House has been fitted up for the Hose carriage, and nothing is now lacking to make the company ready for service but hose, and the Town Council is looking after that. In furnishing their rooms no money has been used but what was paid in by the members, and made at the festival, all contributions having been expended for apparatus and the necessary expenses of the organization.

The Company now numbers 32, and in a very short time the limit fixed by the Constitution, 50, will be reached.

The Winonas do not propose to confine themselves strictly to a fire organization. It is proposed to establish a library at their room, which in time may grow into a public library. In this they ask the assistance of the citizens. Persons having books of any kind, (public documents excepted) which they are willing to contribute to this object, are requested to leave word at this office, when the books will be called for and taken charge of by a committee to be appointed by the company. It is also proposed to try the experiment of a lecture course by means of which our people may have the occasional opportunity of hearing eminent speakers from abroad, who have made reputations in the lecture field. If the company shall receive the cooperation of the people in carrying out these projects, its organization must prove of great benefit not only to the members, but to the community at large.

There will be preaching in the Presbyterian church on Saturday evening.

For the past two weeks the mails seem to have been badly out of order, the morning mail not reaching here until seven o'clock in the evening. Haven't the government officials got over the election yet, or is it the fault of the railroad?

AN EVENING OF LAUGHTER.

The play of "Chris' the Miller's Boy," has been produced for three years in the larger cities with success by Jule Keen and Sallie Adams who will appear at the Opera House Bloomsburg, Wednesday, December first, assisted by a company of seventeen persons. They bring their own brass band and orchestra. Miss Adams will sing many songs and play on many instruments. Jule Keen will keep everybody in jolly good humor and there is no doubt a large audience will be in attendance.

CAUTION ABOUT SHOT IN GAME.

The London Lancet publishes the following: This being the season when game killed by shot, and probably containing the pellets, is eaten, it may be worth while to caution those who consume the flesh of birds with avidity, that the portion for instance, in which shot is found is probably small in comparison with the number of cases in which the pellets are unwittingly swallowed. It is a matter of speculation how much mischief a shot may do, when it is passed into the intestines, but the fact that anomalous diseases have been set up by the presence of very small bodies which have been entangled in folds of the mucus membrane renders it desirable to put the public on their guard. Occasionally the most disastrous results have lull wet such small causes We have in recollection the case of a physician who died after prolonged and unexplained suffering from the impaction of a very small nail which had found its way into a pudding and was inadvertently swallowed. A little care will avoid this contingency: but, some pains ought certainly to be taken to avoid swallowing the missile.

PRECOCIOUSNESS IN CHILDREN.

There are parents who take a great delight in evidences of unusual precociousness in their children and become so anxious for a development of abnormally acute mental faculties that they send them to school at a very tender age. A doctor who has had a large experience writes to the New York Sun on this subject, and says: "During my practice of medicine I have treated many hundred children for various diseases a great many of which were engendered by compulsory mental exertion, together with hygienic neglect during school hours. Although some children may at the age of five or six years, be physically strong enough to undergo mental training, yet from a physiological standpoint the brains (cerebrum and cerebellum) of these little ones are not sufficiently developed to endure a protracted and irksome occupation until the ninth or tenth year. I consider the kindergarten system, after Froebel's, the best method in bringing up children to a certain age. They ought not to be subjected to so rigid a discipline as is generally adopted in our public schools, but should be instructed after an easy, pleasant and amusing method (for otherwise it may have a reflex action on the brain.) There is too much cramming in the present system; if the brain is not ready to receive it it is useless, and to a certain degree even criminal to resort to compulsion."

RODGERS—FUNSTON.

Wednesday Nov. 24th with its bright clear wintry weather brought the wedding of Miss E. Lilian Funston of this place and Harold O. Rodgers of Allentown Pa. The hour fixed for the marriage, being five o'clock P. M. found a goodly company assembled at Saint Paul's Episcopal church. The chancel was simply but tastefully decorated, having the chancel rail and the panels beneath adorned in evergreens. Beneath the chandelier was suspended the traditional marriage bell, white roses set in green, and under which the happy couple were united by the Rev. Mr. Zahner, rector, by the beautiful Episcopal service. The font also was filled with white flowers and ferns; and upon the Communion table was a basket of choice cut flowers.

The ushers, Mr. William Best of Hazleton Pa., and Messrs. W. F. Lowry, C. W. Funston, brother of the bride, and Paul E. Wirt Esq. all of Bloomsburg, were ready to receive and seat the guests as soon as the doors of the church were open. The bridal party arriving at the appointed hour, the procession entered the church and moved up the main isle headed by the ushers. The organ gave forth joyous tones under the able and charming touch of Mrs. Zahner, the rector's wife. Following the ushers came the bridesmaids and groomsmen, Miss Cooper of Hazleton, Pa. and Mr. A. S. Vanwickle also of Hazleton; Miss Hunt of New Haven Conn., and Mr. H. B. Clark of Bloomsburg Pa., Miss Ella Rodgers, of Cincinnati Ohio (sister of the groom) first bridesmaid, Mr. L. S. Allison, of Hazleton, the best man; then followed the bride upon the arm of her father, John A. Funston, who gave her away—the groom crewhile entering from the chancel door.

The ceremony over, the bride and groom led the way out of the church, to the tune of the good old wedding march, followed by their attendants, and were driven to the residence of the bride's father, where a handsome collation was enjoyed.

The bride's dress was of white brocaded surah satin and white silk. The train was very long; the lace decorations were of Duchess very beautiful; the handkerchief being the present of Mrs. R. C. Neal. The long veil of tulle was fastened to the hair by orange blossoms. Over the face, the bride wore her mother's wedding veil. The dresses of the bridesmaids were all cut canvas and they wore veils. Miss Rodgers wore cream satin and white moll, Valenciennes lace, diamond and pearls. Miss Hunt was dressed in a charmingly antique brocade, cream color with embossed roses, Spanish lace, cardinal poppies and gold ornaments. Miss Cooper's dress was a combination of cream satin with polka de chevre satin brocaded with cream roses, handsomely trimmed in meteline lace and chenille fringe, cream and cardinal crushed roses. There were many handsome presents. Besides the set of furniture from the bride's father, and Steinway piano from her mother, there were two beautiful oil paintings from the mother and sister of the groom; two handsome steel engravings from Mr. L. S. Allison and sister Miss Allison; a silver and gold card receiver from Miss Ella Rodgers; Alabaster panel with flowers, Miss Hunt; individual butter dishes, silver lined with gold, Miss Cooper; two very large Kalomein vases, Mr. H. B. Clark; sugar bowl and spoon, silver lined with gold, Messrs Van Wickle and Best; exquisite jewel case, Mr. W. F. Lowry; pin and pendant set with pearls, Mr. C. W. Funston; "Rodger's Group," P. E. Wirt. Then there were handsome bronze mantle ornaments, a Zulu card receiver, silver and glass bouquet holder, silver and glass cologne stand, gold silver spoons, pickle jar, spoons, oxidized toilet set, table linen &c. &c. After the collation, followed by the best wishes of the assembled friends, the happy couple left for Allentown, their future home, on the evening train.

DEATH FROM A WASP'S STING.

A short time ago, at Goldburg, Germany, a farm hand, while eating his mid-day meal, consisting of bread, cheese and milk, which had been sent out to him from his master's kitchen took a wasp into his mouth, and, although he promptly spat it out, the creature found time to plant its sting in the back of his throat before he could get rid of it. The interior of the unfortunate man's larynx swelled so rapidly that in ten minutes he died of suffocation, after enduring terrible agonies in the vain endeavor to breathe and to force open the air passages in his throat. A surgeon, who had been sent for without loss of time, arrived within a quarter of an hour from the time at which the sting had been inflicted, only to find a corpse, surrounded by horror stricken peasants. The deceased, an old soldier attached to the reserve of the King's grenadier regiment, leaves a wife to lament his tragical and untimely end. He had braved with impunity the thousand perils of battle in two campaigns, to perish miserably at last by the sting of a wasp.

The recent changes in some of the mail routes in this county have given great dissatisfaction, because of the inconvenience and delay in the mails. We have heard of many instances. A postal card mailed at Cambra was not received until four days after postmarked. Papers mailed here to persons in the upper end of the county are not received until Tuesday, when they used to go through on the previous Friday. We hope that some attention will be paid to the petitions that are now being circulated and largely signed, for a restoration of the old routes.

TURNING BETS TO A GOOD ACCOUNT

SCRANTON, November 20.—A big sensation has been caused in this city among politicians by the serving of notices upon several prominent citizens, stakeholders in recent election bets, restraining them from paying any money deposited in their hands be betters. The action has been begun by the Scranton Poor Board under a State law passed in 1874 and found in Purdon's Digest in the clauses treating of bets on election, where it provides that stakeholders can be proceeded against by Poor Boards for the full amount put in their hands. John Phillips, formerly a prominent merchant of the city, paid over a large sum that he held, and it is believed that the money can be recovered by the board. County Commissioner Tierney is among the number upon whom notices have been served, and further proceedings in the matter will be watched with great interest by the people of this city.

The medicines of DUNDAS DICK & Co. are unexcelled for elegance, purity, and reliability. Their Seidlitine Seidlitz Powders, are as pleasant as Lemonade. Their Soft Capsules are world famous. See Advt. july 30, '80-6m

"Dr. Clyde" last week Thursday had a good audience, though it was the second time the play has been given here within a few months. Higgins was just as funny as ever. Some changes have been made in the cast of characters since its former presentation some of which were not for the better. On the whole, however, it was good, and the audience went home well pleased. There are but few plays in a country town, and we would suggest to theatrical managers to give something new each time if they want good houses.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CONVENTION AT HILLAY CHURCH.

The North Branch District of the East Susquehanna Classis of the Reformed Church, convened at the Hillay church on the evening of the 16th inst., and continued its sessions during the following day and evening. The following subjects were discussed: "The Church as a Divine Institution," by Rev. W. C Shaeffer, of Danville, who laid stress on the establishment of the Church by the Lord Jesus himself; on its divine agencies; the word and the sacrament; and on its divine life as dictated by the Holy Spirit. The Rev. F. R. Levan followed with an address comparing and contrasting the church with both the State and family.

The second subject, 'The Responsibility of the Church Member,' was well handled by the Chairman in an address which would go right home to any people who admitted their practical duties. Attendance at church, mutual kindness, payment of the pastor's salary, and the reflex blessing of duty done were points put in clear light by the speaker.

The special Harvest Service on Wednesday morning was devotional in its character. An excellent sermon was preached in connection with it by Rev. T. Derr, of Berwick.

Home and Foreign Missions were the themes for Wednesday afternoon, Rev. A. Houtz and the Rev. F. R. Levan, of Wilkesbarre, spoke on Home Missions, showing the nature and extent of the work, and suggesting what in their opinion were the best means of putting the Reformed Church in position to do it well. Rev. E. D. Miller, of Ringtown, spoke of Foreign Missions, dealing with the subject in its general character and in its particular relation to the Reformed Church. He gave many valuable and interesting facts and statements. During the Wednesday evening session which was the last, the church was filled to its utmost capacity. The Rev. G. B. Dechant, of Catawissa, spoke on the 'Religious Education of Children in the Family.' This work should be commenced when they are in the cradle, by sacred melodies; they should be taught the child's prayer; pray with and for your children; taught by precept and example, and also to give alms. This was an excellent address.

Rev. E. D. Miller spoke on the 'Religious Education of Children in the Sabbath School.' He recommended systematic teaching, preparation and qualification on the part of the teacher.

Rev. A. Houtz spoke on the 'Religious Education of Children by the Pastor. He stated that the Church was a family, children admitted into this family by baptism, and that the Pastor was a spiritual guide and parent to the children. Rev. N. Spear, of the Presbyterian church, followed with some interesting remarks.

Collections for benevolence was lifted at each session. A vote of thanks for the kind hospitality was given.

Now that the streams are frozen over nothing can prevent the boys from skating. As each season brings its quota of drownings from carelessness or recklessness, we would caution the boys to be careful. There is always a strong temptation to do something smart, to skate over dangerous spots where other boys dare not venture, and from this spirit comes most of the deaths chronicled at this time of year all over the country. The only safe way is to wait until the ice is sufficiently thick to bear, without danger, and then keep both eyes open for air holes.

The first Part of the new famous serial by Eugene Schuyler, 'The Life of Peter the Great' was finished in October. A NEW PAYING OCCUPATION
—FOR—
LADIES & GENTLEMEN

The Handsome Nickel Plated New Home Lamp being introduced to the public this season, is the most meritorious article ever offered agents to make money with, is safer and more convenient than the student lamp, which has heretofore had the reputation of being the safest lamp made, it has a clamp to attach it to the sewing machine, piano, organ, desk, etc. The rear of the ordinary lamp being accidentally upset or thrown from the table, is entirely relieved by the simple clamp contrivance. It can be adjusted to throw the light just where it is wanted to suit the eyes, and can be converted into a handsome wall lamp. It has the best argand burner, a filling indicator, and convenient match box, and its price is within the reach of every one. It has been fully tested and endorsed by readers of the Western Christian Advocate, Am. Christian Review, Herald and Presbyter, Journal and Messenger, and Christian Standard, the leading religious papers of Cincinnati, and is endorsed by the Mayor and Postmaster of Cincinnati, the agent of the American express company and presidents of insurance companies, as being the safest, most convenient and best lamp made.

There are three reasons why agents should seek such an article to canvass for—first for its absolute safety and great convenience, it is needed in every home—second its low price masses its sale immense—third it will be a great credit to handle such an article. One southern agent writes, it sells faster than Gen. Lee's portrait sold right after the war, another writes, it beats the palmy days of the sewing machine, its rapid sale, low price, and liberal terms surprise all agents. Address H. McLamp Co., Cincinnati, O., mentioning our paper and they will give you full particulars and exclusive territory to canvass in. nov.5-13w

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to call your attention to it. He says: "In the fall of 1878 when I was taken with a Violent Bleeding of the Lungs followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was one week at one time that I could not sit up in the summer of 1879 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar, I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines, I was so far gone at one time a report went around I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification I commenced to feel better. My hope once dead began to spring, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have for three years.

I will write this hoping you will publish it so that every one afflicted with diseased lungs will be induced to take Dr. Wistar's Balsam for the Lungs, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED and that this remedy is the best as it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work. Sold by druggists. Take Wm. Hall's Balsam only—Beware of counterfeits. oct.16-1yeow

HOW TO GET almost Everything.

Do you know how to get in the easiest way and to best advantage what you want for dress and house-furnishing?

First, how: Write for a catalogue; see what you can learn from it about the things you want. If samples can be useful to you, ask for them and state your wants so plainly that exactly the right samples can be sent.

Second, where: The place where goods are kept in the greatest variety; where they are sold for what they really are in respect to quality; where prices are lowest; where most care is taken to serve customers acceptably; and where you have the right to return whatever is not satisfactory.

There—no matter where you are—if you make your wants known and avail yourself of your privileges, you will get the best things in the best way, promptly and without trouble or risk; sometimes by mail, sometimes by express, almost always at less cost for carriage than the money you save in the price.

A great deal is said about the balance of trade as an element in our business prosperity. It is generally taken for granted that if the balance of trade with foreign countries is in favor of our people, we must have prosperous times. Whether this holds good in point of fact, is a question not pertinent to the particular subject we propose to consider. It is a fact, however, beyond all dispute, that when the balance of trade is in our favor, we are richer in money than we would be if the balance of trade were against us. When our exports exceed our imports in value, it follows that foreign traders become indebted to our people, and must pay the difference in money or bonds.

The balance of trade is at present, and has been for several years, in favor of the United States. The natural result has been that a considerable portion of our bonds formerly held abroad have found their way back to us, and large shipments of gold and silver have been made to this country. What has caused this turn of the commercial tide in our favor? The answer is corn and cotton. The failure of the wheat crop in Europe, and the consequent large demand for foreign grain, made a demand for the immense surplus products of our own fields. The exports of cotton have also largely increased, and the two American staples have jointly produced the favorable balance of trade.

But the wheat crop is not always a certainty in this country. Nor is a continued failure of that crop in Europe to be anticipated. It may therefore be expected that the balance of trade in the near future will depend more particularly upon the number of bales of cotton we shall produce than upon the products of any other branch of industry. At last we will be obliged to fall back on cotton as the chief article of export to save us from an adverse balance of trade. Now it is the south that produces cotton. It is the southern industry and enterprise that must give us the means of maintaining a favorable balance of trade if it is to be maintained at all. Since the expulsion of the carpet-bagger from the control of the Southern State Governments, and since the people of the South have been permitted to govern themselves, and to send their representative men to Congress, their industries have revived and the yield of cotton especially has been largely increased.

"I Don't Want That Stuff,"

Is what a lady of Boston said to her husband when he brought home some medicine to cure her of sick headache and neuralgia which had made her miserable for fourteen years. At the first attack thereafter, it was administered to her with such good results that she continued its use until cured, and was so enthusiastic in its praise, that she induced twenty-two of the best families in her circle to adopt it as their regular family medicine. That "stuff" is Hop Bitters.—Standard.

Discovery of Silk and Satin.

The discovery of silk is attributed to one of the wives of the emperor of China, Hoang-ti, who reigned about two thousand years before the Christian era; and since that time a special spot has always been allotted in the gardens of the Chinese royal palace to the cultivation of the mulberry tree—called in Chinese the "golden tree"—and to the keeping of silk worms. The first silk dress in history was made, not for a sovereign nor for a pretty woman, but for a monster in human shape, Heliogabalus.

Persian monks who came to Constantinople reveled to the emperor Justinian the secret of the production of silk, and gave him some silk worms. From Greece the art passed into Italy at the end of the thirteenth century. When the popes left Rome to settle at Avignon, France, they introduced into that country the secret which had been kept by the Italians; and Louis XI established at Tours a manufactory of silk fabrics. Francis I founded the Lyons silk worms, which, to this day, have kept the first rank. Henry II, of France, wore the first pair of silk hose ever made at the wedding of his sister. The word "satin," which in the original was applied to all silk stuffs in general, has, since the last century, been used to designate only tissues which prevent a lustered surface. The discovery of this particular brilliant stuff was accidental. Octavio Mai, a silk weaver, finding business very dull, and not knowing what to invent to give a new impulse to the trade, was one day pacing to and fro before his loom. Every time he passed the machine with no definite object in view, he pulled little threads from the warp and put them into his mouth which soon afterward he spat out. Later on, he found the little ball of silk on the floor of his workshop, and was attracted by the brilliant appearance of the threads He repeated the experiment and by using certain mucilaginous preparations succeeded in giving a new luster to his tissues.

I have been a sufferer for years with Catarrh, and under a physician's treatment for over a year, have tried a number of 'sure cure' remedies and obtained no relief. I was advised to try Ely's Cream Balm. It gave me immediate relief. I believe I am now entirely cured. G. S. Davis, First National Bank, Elizabeth, N. J., Aug. 14, 1879.

By far the best remedy for the treatment of Catarrh and its kindred diseases is Ely's Cream Balm, which is having the largest sales with us of any preperation now offered. The reports are all favorable, and we do not hesitate to indorse it as superior to any and all other articles in the market. The balm is pleasant and easy to use. Cyrus Lawall & Son, Druggists, Easton, Pa.

There are wide areas of fine farming lands in Georgia that lie untouched by husbandmen in belts of country as healthy as any in the Union. There is also an enterprising spirit abroad in the State manifesting itself in a rapidly growing investment in manufacturing enterprises. From a recent official report we learn that "there are now in operation in Georgia fifty gold mills, with nearly 500 stamps, representing nearly $500,000 brought into the State from the north and west during the last five years, and that new investments are constantly being made. As evidence of Georgia's mineral wealth it is reported that iron ore has been found in 71 counties, gold ore 61, limestone in 38, granite in 45, quartz in 46, soapstone in 22, asbestos in 28, corundum in 9, copper in 27, kaolin in 11, manganese in 15 and marble in 6. A survey shows that more than 600 streams afford water-power which can be used for cotton factories and other manufactures." Why should not the tide of emigration that sets westward from the Eastern and Middle States pour itself southward? From Virginia to Georgia the South Atlantic States offer inducements greater than the distant plains of Kansas and Nebraska, and a climate incomparably superior.

The Campbellite church at Washington is a small and mean structure. In anticipation of Garfield's worship drawing a crowd, an enlargement is talked of. The Foundry Methodist church where Hayes attended, will now lose its chief attraction for visitors.

How to Treat the Epizoety.

To give a detailed line of treatment for the numerous and varied phases of the present form of the outbreak of influenza, or what is commonly termed epizootic, would involve a good deal of work; in fact, would require a book to be written without exhausting the subject. In its present mild form the visible mucous membranes are usually the principal seat of the disease, and, as such, cause the animal but little inconvenience beyond a severe cough and a little discharge from the nose. Such cases require nothing more in the way of treatment than good nursing, good food, moderate work and a warm stable, with liberal doses of nitrate of potash to keep the kidneys active and reduce the tendency to œdema of the extremities. It is also well to give a little chlorate of potash in the form of an electuary to soothe the diseased membranes. This, like 'hay fever' in the human subject, is not amenable to treatment with a view of effecting a cure, since its presence is the result of an an irritating principle floating in the atmosphere; and so long as that fungi is present so long will the trouble exist. In some cases the malady goes beyond the superficial structures and involves the bronchi and even the lung tissue proper, producing bronchitis, pneumoria, and sometimes pleuritis. This form of the malady being extremely debilitating, with more or less mortality associated, it behooves the practitioner to husband the animal's strength. Our method is to stimulate the patient from the beginning, notwithstanding there is always more or less fever present. It is a rule in the school of allopathy to treat a case upon general principles, i. e., the symptoms, but this malady calls for a departure. The old method of lancet and sedatives would be pretty sure to make quick work with the most robust constitution. Distilled spirits, ammonia, camphor and quinine are the principal medicines indicated, and when there is a loss of appetite give liberally of milk punch, and keep the extremities warm by friction and bandages, and if the bowels become costive give rectile injections of warm water and soap. If the glands become swollen apply a stimulating liniment. Attend closely to hygiene, and avoid irritating preparations to the animal's sides, as their tendency is to irritate and debilitate the patient, and can accomplish no good.

A Big Success.

"My wife had been ailing a long time with dyspepsia and nervousness and was in bed two years with a complication of disorders her physicians could not cure, when I was led by reading a circular at my door to try Parker's Ginger Tonic. Having been so often deceived by worthless mixtures, nothing but my wife's dangerous condition could have led us to make any more experiments. But it was a big success. Three bottles cured her at a cost of a dollar and fifty cents, and she is now as strong as any woman, and regularly does her household duties.—R. D., Buffalo, See other column. nov

Capt. Bates and his wife, formerly the giants of Barnum's show, recently made an overland journey from San Francisco. They are each nearly eight feet long, and the sleeping car berths are only six. In order to secure a comfortable bed, they took the opposite sections, connected the upper berths with an adjustable piece, and laid themselves crosswise of the car, the other passengers kindly consenting to the partial obstruction of the passage at night.
